

I AM PURPOSE & BELIEFS

Purpose

The "I AM" Principles are created to advance the proper alignment of one's purpose with one's destiny. This proper alignment process is called Ori-Ire among the Yoruba of West African. When one's head or thoughts are not in alignment with one's destiny or purpose they refer to it as Ori-Ibe. This misalignment process occurs most often when one receives incorrect information about themselves. This is a common occurrence for people who have been oppressed, denigrated, and dehumanized. This has been the recent African/Black experience within the Western thought and ideology. It has been challenging for African/Black people in the Americas and throughout the world to radiate with the full brilliance of God due to incorrect knowledge of self. We have been inundated with erroneous information about which we are not so much that we find it challenging to express who we have been divinely created to be. The "I AM" Principles aim to correct the faulty perception of self within those who have been given negative information about their real power. Having this knowledge moves people to walk in the fullness of their divine greatness and they will experience unlimited Peace, Power and Prosperity.

What we believe: The I am a fundamental

We hold that people have come from the Divine Source of the Universe. The Divine force goes by many different names in various languages. In English we refer to It as God. It is in our being to be connected with God: it is our Divine Naturalization of the Anatomy (DNA) that joins us with the Divine. Often we fail to acknowledge this connection that we have and we start to experience extremely chaotic lives. It is at this point that one may proclaim an existence that is inconsistent with whom we are. We may say "I am pathetic," "I am a loser," "I am an addict," etc. Whatever follows "I am" becomes a proclamation of existence thereby creating a state of being. Since our substance is Divine then proclaiming anything other than our Divinity is against God. We believe that one must proclaim only that which is consistent with their true Divine essence so that they can operate in harmony with the Divine. We believe that people can be enlightened into their real essence and therefore have the ability to live life with full power. The I AM Courses are designed to assist people with living with the full harmony of their Divine Power.
